LABOR leader Shimon Peres announced last night that be would not be a candidate for prime minister in the 2000 clections.

"I think the time has come for a change," Peres told Channel 1 last night, ending months of spec-ulation about his political future. "I won't run in the year 2000 to be prime minister.

He said he would remain party leader until the Labor Party's internal elections slated for July 1997.

The announcement set the stage for a bitter succession battle io the Labor Party.

Peres refused to say who he would back as his successor. But when asked by interviewer Nissim

However, no one among the party leadership assumed that Peres would in four years - at the age of 77 - really run for prime minister. If he did harbor any inclination to do so, it is believed that Barak's recently announced candidacy in effect nipped whatever lingering hopes Peres might have entertained.

Peres had earlier hoped to postpone the contest for the party leadership until 1999, a year before the nation goes to the polls.

However, in the Channel 1 interview last night, he said: "The party must stick to its schedule for elections, according to which the party conven-don is to meet at the beginning of 1997 in be followed by the elections in mid-1997 ...

Early primaries are considered to be a disad-vantage to MK Haim Ramon, seen as Barak's chief adversary. It was in Ramon's interest to put the leadership bout off for as loog as possible, since he is now in the underdog position, especially as his failed campaign strategy is under strong fire.

Kibbutz cows get their just desserts LIAT COLLINS

LIFE is sweet for the lucky cows who live at Kibbutz Ein Hamifratz in western Galilee.

They eat ice cream. The 320 cows at Ein Hamifratz have been receiving their just desserts for the past two months. Every morning, a truck from the nearby Strauss dairy delivers a ton of ice cream to the kibbutz cowsheds.

The dairy is happy: The ice cream is production surplus determined unfit for burnan consumption. Finding a cheap means of having its waste simply gobhled up is a bandy solution for the plant, which has been forced to comply with stricter rules on industrial waste disposal in recent years.

The cows are reportedly licking their lips. Before the ice cream, they were used to cheese water. Happier still are the cowhands. Not only are the satisfied cows producing more milk, but apparently the stench of rotten vegetables, which marks cowsheds clsewhere, is gradually giving way to a sweet vanilla-flavored aroma.

Despite Health Ministry warnings that the ice cream is not for human consumption, large quantities of the new delicacy began to disappear before the cows got a chance to lick at it. The kibbutz in-house video channel even screened a satire on the food fad, but to no avail: members were not cowed, and the dessert continues to disappear.

Ross says settlement policy complicates negotiations

DEFENSE Minister Yitzhak Mordechai's approval of plans to build some 1,800 housing units in the haredi settlemeot of Mattityahu/Kiryat Sefer, located just over the Greeo Line in the Modi'in region, raised the ire yesterday of the Palestinian Authority, the US and peace activists.

The State Department's Middle East coordioator Dennis Ross met with PA Chairman Yasser Arafat in Gaza and was compelled to address the issue of the new settlement housing. "This decision which has been taken by Mr.

Mordechai concerning building oew houses is another breach of what has been agreed upon and what has been signed," Arafat said at a press conference .

Ross responded that "the American policy on settlemeot policy has not changed. We continue to see that it's a problem. We continue to see it's the kind of activity which complicates the negotiating process.

Ross did not use the customary word "obstacle" which Palestinians see as a stronger coodemnation than "problem."

Peace Now first reported on the settlement plan being approved. According to the group, which is closely monitoring building plans and construction in the settlements, this is the

that has been approved since the new government came to power in May. Under a government decision that reversed the settlement freeze, all new building in the settlements - as well as the placement of mobile homes - must be approved by Mordechai.

Mordechai's office would neither deny or confirm the reports, but said that the defense minister, along the lines of the government policies, is discussing various plans. "Every approval given is looked at from a legal and security point of view," Mordechai's office said in a statement. "What is being discussed is oot new settlements, but approval of existing plans for existing settlements."

Settlement officials said that smaller development projects io Givat Ze'ev, Ma'alch Adumim and Har Adar have also beeo approved by Mordechai. What all these projects, as well as the Mattityahu/Kiryat Sefer project have in common, is that they are slated for settlements just beyond the Green Line which are likely to stay inside Israel in any future border readjustmeots.

As a result, settlement leaders played down the significance of the plans in Mattityahu/Kiryat Sefer. "This is nothing to get excited about," said Yechiel Leiter, spokesman for the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea, Samaria and Gaza. "This is just across from Modi'in, it is oot 1,800 units in the heart of Judea and Samaria."

Leiter said that Mordechai is merely approv-ing what former prime minister Shimon Peres promised haredi leaders he would build in Kiryat Sefer. The difference, Leiter said, "is that whereas Peres promised to build, but probably would not have done so, this government is implementing the plans."

According to Peace Now, the development will spread over some 150 dunams, and will increase the population of Mattityahu/Kiryat Sefer, today some 2,900 people, nearly eightfold. Peace Now sent a letter to Mordechai protesting the plans, and expressing "amazement" that he would approve the plans just prior to last night's meeting with Arafat. Peace Now spokesmen said it is not surprising that building will begin in a place like Mattityahu/Kiryat Sefer, since it is politically less problematic because of its proximity to the Green Line and it is politically wise for the government to build for haredim.

As long as security is strengthened, we can advance with the processes themselves and do our utmost to ease and support the Palestinian Authority in those arcas in which we can do so. I want to thank Abu Amar for hosting me tonight," Mordechai said. Arafat described the meeting as positive, but when asked if he had agreed to make any changes in the Hebron agreement, he said that "the steering committee will carry on all these details." Mordechai said that "Hebron is a vety complicated subject. We are trying together to find the best solution for both sides and we will find it."

The Palestinian officials who joined Arafat at the meeting have said repeatedly that they will not accept any renegotiation of the Hebroo redeployment. So the issue has been bow to produce an agreement that will let Israel show it bas improved security for Israelis in Hebron, while Arafat can show that it is essentially unchanged.

Authorities said it apparently hit a reef while returning to the North after dropping off infiltrators on a beach.

But there was speculation the submarine could have been sent to pick up an agent or drop off a small unit of spies - and the mission theo went wrong.

Shin Sang-kil, deputy head of operations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters troops found a machine gun with 75 rounds of ammunition, a Soviet-made rifle with 100 bullets and 75 other bullets on the vessel.

The Defense Ministry said the Sang-o class sobmarine measured 34 meters in length and weighed 330 tons. North Korea has about 10 of these submarines, each capable of carrying 21 people, a ministry official said.

Thousands of troops and police using sniffer dogs combed terrain around the beach as helicopters roared overhead. They set up checkpoints on all main roads. Naval vessels and a reconnaissance plane joined the search.

After a dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed, two North Koreans

500 students tour Hebron

Deputy Education Minister Peled: This is not political

DEPUTY Education Minister Moshe Peled accompanied some 500 girls from a seminary in Kibbutz Hafetz Haim to Hebron yesterday, and said this was the beginning of what he hoped would be "tour season to Hehron.

Critics quickly lashed out at Peled, saying that by using his office to encourage school visits to Hebron, be is involved in "political brainwashing."

"These tours are not political," Peled countered. "They enhance the study of Eretz Yisrael, and lead to a love for the land. It is impossible to learn about the country without going out to see it."

Peled said he is responsible for creating con-ditions that will make such trips possible, such as ensuring proper security for the students, and for encouraging schools "to go everywhere from Tel Hai to Hebron."

HERB KEINON

dismissed claims that Hebron is too dangerous for school groups, saying that it is the IDF's responsibility to provide security so that visits are possible, adding that if you take the position that it is too dangerous to visit, "theo the only safe place is in the grave. Schoolchildren got hurt in Tel Aviv and Afula," he said, referring to terror attacks that occurred there.

MK Dalia Itzik (Labor), who headed the Knesset Education Committee under the previous government, said she has nothing against visiting Hebron, but is against sending students there to achieve political goals.

"I think it is wonderful to get to know the land, hut when going to Hebron becomes Peled's obsessioo, it has a political smell," she said. "He wants to give the students the feeling Peled said that some 15 school groups visit-ed Hebron during the first week of school. He ment - which is all great and wonderful - will preserve it. If he would work to take students to other places, I could understand his desire to instill a love of the land, but his obsession is with Hehron."

MK Yossi Sarid (Meretz) said the tours, which "have a clear political nature," are attempts to "brainwash the students. There is no room here for the establishment to become involved in tours to Hehroo. This should be up to students and teachers."

Hebron settlement leaders see the tours as very significant.

"They help grant legitimacy to our being bere," said David Wilder, a spokesman for the Hebron settlement. "For the last four years school groups didn't come here, and this helped those who wanted to say that Hebron doesn't beloog to us, and that the army can't protect the Jews in it. These school groups are important for the settlement, both psychologically and politically."

Syria says Israeli policies puld lead to war

DAMASCUS (Reuter) - The policies of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu have caused tension in the Middle East and could lead to war, Syria said yesterday.

The remarks, which appeared in Syria's official press, were the latest sign of tension between the two countries, fucled by Syrian troop movements in Lebanon.

Fayez Sayegh, director-general of the official Syrian news agency Sana, said Israel's policy is aimed at "undermining the peace process and driving the region and its peo-ple to a state of tension and escalation ... and maybe war."

signed agreement." At one point during the meeting Arafat sent out his chief of protocol to ask Israeli reporters if Shimon Peres had decided to leave political life, as rumors based on his Channel 1 TV interview last night suggested. Mordechai reportedly laid out the principles for the Hehron redeployment. The defense minister presented to Arafat only general principles connected with redeployment in Hebron, which will be brought before the cabinet for approval in the future," the Prime Minister's Office said last night. The statement came after six of the 11 inner cabinet ministers complained yesterday to Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu that they were not made privy to the ideas on Hebron redeployment that Mordechai was planning to put to Arafat. Complaining about Hehron were National Infrastructure Minister Ariel Sharon, Agriculture Minister Rafael Eitan, Science Minister Ze'ev Begin, Tourism Minister Moshe Katsav, Education Mioister Zevulun Hammer and Internal Minister Avigdor Security Kahalani.

But Netanyahu said that the cabinet had authorized a threeman panel - himself, Mordechai and Foreign Minister David Levy - to deal with all issues relating to oegotiations with the Palestinians and therefore he would not divulge these ideas now. They will be brought to the full cabinet only after the negotiations, he said

The US, meanwhile, is urging Israel to make a variety of gestures that would improve the Palestinians' economic conditions, officials said.

There are indications that US Middle East peace coordinator Dennis Ross will raise the possibilities of easing the Palestinian economic situation during his talks here.

Sources say the US would like Israel to:

 Enable Palestinian commerce between Gaza and the West Bank to grow by inaugurating safe pas-sage routes, as called for in the Oslo declaration of principles. Palestinians do not object to IDFsupervised escorts, thereby addressing concerns that trucks would stay in Israel. The first passage road would be from Gaza to Turkiminiye, near Hehron.

The US would like to see greater access given to Palestinian husinessmen seeking to travel between the West Bank and Gaza.

 Quicken the pace of security inspections for Palestinian exports to Egypt and Jordan. The IDF has agreed to supervise private Israeli security firms actually conducting the searches to ease manpower constraints, hut more inspectors are needed.

B'Tselem: Lift restrictions Haredi girls school closed down on new Gush Etzion road over discrimination dispute IDF: Security, convenience are at issue

A HAREDI girls school in Bnei Brak closed down yesterday until a solution can be found to a dispute in which parents of Sephardi children have accused the school of separating Sephardi and Ashkenazi pupils. The Sephardi parents have not sent their chil-dren to school since the beginning of the year, saving that the division of pupils in this fashion

A decision 10 close the school, Sha'arej Aharon, was made on Tuesday after Sephardi pareots burst into the classroom of Ashkenazi pupils and forced the teachers and pupils to leave the school grounds. The parents, school principal and the nelghborhood rabbi all agreed to close the school.

The heads of the haredi Atzma'i school network met yesterday to discuss what they called the "serious incident of violence that occurred in the school

Parents of the Ashkenazi pupils who were forced out of their classes accused the Sephardi parents of acting violently and threatening the pupils. During the incident, the school princi-pal stayed locked in her office, with three guards stationed outside.

On Tuesday, an Education Ministry committee set up to examine the dispute had announced that the classes would be reorganized according to last year's arrangement, under which the Ashkenazi and Sephardi pupils were mixed, and the the Sephardi pupils would return to school.

However, Education Ministry Director-General Ben-Zion Del, who headed the commitnee, said that in the coming days a wider committee, including parents, municipal officials, and haredi educators would conduct a thorough discussion of the situation in the school and the parents' complaints, and would work to find a ermanent solution to the problem.

Tsomet MK Eliezer Zandberg called for funding to be halted to haredi schools that discriminated on the hasis of ethnic background. (Itim)

Jewish family from Beirut visits Safed grave

A JEWISH family from Beirnt came to Safed for the first time on Tuesday to visit the grave of a relative who was buried in the town in 1982.

In the midst of the Lebanon War, the IDF asked the Safed religious council to help bury a Beirut Jew in the town, at his family's request. The council made all of the arrangements for his burial.

The family members, who asked to keep their identity secret, were surprised to find a tombstone on the grave. "We thought the grave would be bare, since we did not order a tombstone," one of the family members said.

The council representatives explained that they had financed the erection of the tombstone, and the family thanked them.

As a result of the visit, the family is considering buying additional plots in the Safed cemetery, say-ing that the Lebanese authorities would allow family members to be buried there.

"But we hope there will soon be peace and there won't be a problem," a relative said. (Itim) (Itim)

PARIS - An appeals court has ordered Maurice Papon, a former Vichy official, to stand trial for minors under 15 years old, inhuman arresting and deporting 1,690 Jews during World War II, giving families of the dead a bittersweet victory in a 15-year battle. The court ruled yesterday in

N

Bordeaux that the 86-year-old Frenchman must face a jury to account for his role in the pro-Nazi regime's collaboration in the extermination of Jews.

Papon's lawyer immediately filed an appeal, delaying the start of a trial by at least six months and further frustrating victims and their families who want him on the stand before he dies.

"If there's going to be a trial, it has to be soon," said Juliette Dray, 62, who narrowly escaped a Papon sweep in 1942. "Little by little, we're all dying off."

Jean Leguay and Maurice Sabatier, Papon's superiors, died in 1989 before they could be tried as Nazi collaborators. Rene Bousquet, the national police chief during the war, was killed by a publicity-seeker in 1993 on the eve of his war crimes trial.

Papon is only the second Frenchman to be sent to trial for such crimes and may well he the last. A lower-ranking collaborator, former militia officer Paul Touvier, was jailed for life in 1994 and died in prison this year aged 81.

The Bordeaux court went further than prosecutors had sought, sending Papon to a jury trial m an assize court on charges of being an accomplice to the murder and kidnapping of 10 convoys of deportees. Prosecutors had earmarked just four convoys.

The court also approved charges atives were when they died.

US troops begin new Gulf deployment

FORT HOOD, Texas (Reuter) - The Army yesterday began deploying more than 3,000 troops to the Gulf as part of the Clinton administration's latest moves to guard against further military action by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein

A first group of 219 soldiers from the 1st Cavalry Division headed from Fort Hood army base in central Texas to Kuwait on a commercial jet after saying goodbye to their families. Defense officials said a C-5 military cargo plane would follow in the afternoon with 73 soldiers and key satellite equipment on board, and two flights early today would take 700 more troops.

L1.-Col. Randy Schoel said the staggered deployment of about 3,000 troops from two battalions at Fort Hood, the US Army's largest base, would be completed over two or three days, with each flight to Kuwait

"They are ready, they are prepared and they are excited," said Maj. Mary Ann Cummings as the first group took off. She said almost all their heavy equipment was in place in Kuwait.

Rifkind welcomes Swiss moves on Nazi gold BERN, Switzerland (AP) - British Foreign Minister Malcolm Rifkind yesterday welcomed a move by the Swiss government to order an investigatioo into Swiss wartime dealings with the Nazis. The Swiss government confirmed Monday it would pass legislation this autumn to waive strict banking secrecy laws and permit an exhaustive search of wartime documeots. The investigation, which will likely take several years, would clear up "once and for all " speculation that looted Nazi gold may still be hidden in Swiss bank vaults, said Swiss Foreign Minister Flavio Cotti.

In Zurich, the Bank for International Settlements (BIS) said it would cooperate with any competent authority - such as a Berneappointed commission of experts or Holocaust account panel - that wished to examine its records with regards to the fate of Nazi gold. "We would cooperate with competent authorities when requests are made." BIS general-secretary Gunter Baer told Reuters in response to inquiries.

Basle-based BIS, central bank to the worlds' central banks, has beeo drawn into the current debate over the fate of Nazi gold because of its role in overseeing reparations from Germany to the Allied governments following World War 1.

US senator Alfonse D'Amato, chairman of the Senate banking committee, recently wrote to BIS geoeral manager Andrew Crockett, asking BIS to publish its records covering Nazi gold.

Superman, Lois Lane finally getting married NEW YORK (AP) - Who says there's no such thing as a storybook romance? Only those who have forgotten about the rocky but persistent love affair between comic hero Superman and Lois Lane. They're finally getting married – in print and on television – after a courtship of about 60 years, DC Comics executive editor, Mike Carlin said.

"They've decided it's the right thing to do," Carlin told the New York Post in Tuesday's editioos. The Man of Steel, also known as mild-mannered reporter Clark

Kent, will say "I do" to his Daily Planet colleague in a special comic called "Superman: The Wedding Album."

The comic book goes on sale October 9, just three days after their television counterparts get hitched on the American TV show Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman. The couple has dated since 1938, when the first Superman comic book debuted.

Eternal romance

GREER FAY CASHMAN

HILE other designers are going in for classic, mannish parts with are going in for classic, mannish pants suits or gaudy reconstructions of the flower-child era, Dorin Frankfurt remains eternally romantic. Although she does have some flip-skirted minis in her new cnllection, she continues to favor maxi dresses with long sleeves and portrait necklines - styles which are sufficiently demure to convey innocence, yet sufficiently provocative to exude a sense of the feminine mystique. Castro, which also features several maxis in its fall collection, puls more swagger than romance into its styles, utilizing positive/negative concepts in hlack and white plain and printed separates.

The little black dress, which seems to have survived the parade of changing trends, is this season the staple of every woman's personal wardrobe. It can look dramatically stunning on its own, or can be worn as a tunic top over pants or a maxi skirt. It takes on a more casual appearance under a textured cardigan or a ribbed polonecked sweater.

It's the ideal, any-occasioo gar-ment to be dressed up or dressed down at whim - and the best news of all is that it's available for as little as NIS 200.

Okay, you won't get the best cut or quality for that price - but given that the little black dress is going to be a ceotral part of the minimal-

RUTHIE BLUM

ESS than a year ago, the Knesset passed an amendment to the National Insurance Law of 1955 finally recognizing the right of housewives to receive a pension at age 60. Until the amendment was put into effect, everyone over 18 was insured for an old-age pension ... except for housewives, whom the law defined as "married women tending to their households," and not working [sic]. Married men, on the other hand, whether working or not were insured in any case.

While some might consider this small step for womankind a large stride in the right direction, one reader presented a complaint to this column which contributes an interesting twist to the question of equality between men and women within the work-force and without.

Knesset, and not the NIL, which is responsihle. "During Ora Namir's term as social affairs minister, a committee was formed to lobby for legislation to treat housewives as [unemployed] men [whereby they'd have to pay NII, but at least would be completely insured]," he said. The end result, according to Mena, was the above amendment. Mrs. L. believes there must be other couples in a similar situation. She just doesn't lotow how' to go about finding them. Na'amat Legal Department Director Adv.

Etti Pilpel considered my account of Mrs. L's predicament to be of interest. "We handle all kinds of cases relevant to women, within the family structure and the workforce." She said, describing a case she is dealing with currently: "A recent amend-ment to the law which enables mothers of young children to have a shorter work day now allows for husbands and wives to decide among themselves whether the father or the mother will take advantage of the parent' privileges [including a certain oumber of 'sick days' for children's illnesses]," she explained.

next decade we are going to see the benevolent, he added. "They are very growth of technology as we have never seco it before."

But the gradual takeover of the world will probably start in the kitchen rather than aboard a spacecraft orbiting Jupiter, Burns said.

He described washing machines that can decide how much detergent and what temperature water is oeeded to wash a load of clothes depending on its weight.

"I believe that the new generation of machines will be taking far more strategic decisioos io all aspects of our lives," he told a news cooference ahead of his presentation.

"I think it is more or less inevitable. We have this momentum in intelligent machine design which will be difficult to stop," Burns added. "Business

New technology that allows computers to think for themselves, rather than following clumsy line-by-line commands, will make the difference. In the past these machines have behaved in a way we programmed them to." Burns said. "They are now capable of learning."

Mrs. L., a wife and mother, has a full-time government joh. Her unemployed husband keeps house and takes care of their children. Mrs. L.'s National Insurance payments are deducted automatically from her salary, as . are her health fund (Kupat Holim) fees. Nevertheless, her husband is required by law to pay separately for his National Insurance, albeit a significantly lower amount than he would have to pay if he were employed - as well as additional Kupat Holim dues

"If the situation were reversed," complained the frustrated Mrs. L., "I wouldn't have to pay National Insurance, and I would be covered by my husband's Kupat Holim dues." Mrs. L. is interested in fighting to change the law. She feels ill equipped to do so on her own. Avraham Mena, Director of the NII Insurance Department, confirmed the above facts, but stressed that it is the

Missed opportunity

THE Brodet Committee, which on Tuesday introduced its suggested structural reforms of the capital markets, has striven with great professionalism toward the desirable goal of promoting long-term savings, but shot itself in the foot by proposing to tax short-term savings plans. In typical Israeli fashion, this committee was not assembled and assigned its important task uotil a three-year-old crisis in Tel Aviv's oncebuoyant financial markets came to a boiling point - highlighted by a massive flight from provident funds and government bonds - and finally knocked officials out of their complacency.

Consequently, the committee was compelled to work under an unnecessarily tight two-month deadline and against the relatively coincidental backdrop of the public flocking en masse to the banks' assorted short-term savings plans.

Yet while these plans are indeed lucrative right now, that is only because the Bank of Israel has been forced into a tight-money policy, due to irresponsible politicians who spent too much public money, and a Treasury that failed miserably in forecasting internal revenues.

The central bank's high interest rates dictate the price of credit across the economy, and that includes sbort-term savings. Eventually, in the way of all economic cycles, interest rates will drop and with them the attractiveness of shortterm savings plans.

Strategically speaking, then, the committee whose members stressed time and again their intention to impact on the markets mainly in the long term - could have allowed Mr. Average Israeli to remain for now with what he perceives as a financial anchor.

More importantly, the proposed taxation of sbort-term savings is likely to emerge as a major tactical fiasco.

For one thing, it stands a very slim chance of getting past the wall-to-wall political opposition it has inevitably generated. No one, until now, bas managed to unite on any issue the likes of Meretz chairman, MK Yossi Sarid, Prime Minister's Office director-general Avigdor . Lieberman, Bank of Israel Governor Jacob Frenkel, and Histadrut Chairman Amir Peretz all of whom have strongly criticized the report.

Moreover, the prospect of taxation being perceived as the bottom line of the report not only threatens Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's popularity, but in fact might further damage the public's trust in the financial system. The basic problem with the Israeli investor is not only one of habit, but also of availability and mentality. Historically shorn of lucrative, long-term financial instruments - whether in the form of freely negotiable long-term bonds, amply supplied blue-chip stocks, or freely accessible foreign securities - Israelis need to be coaxed, not whipped, into changing their savings and investment habits.

Unfortunately, the proposals fail - mainly because of the committee's narrowly defined task - to make these instruments available and thus herald a long overdue revolution.

The committee's key proposals revolve around the theme of taxation: To offer provident-fund tax breaks only when those are redeemed at retirement age; to reduce taxes on bond gains; to increase tax exemptions on pensions; to keep training funds tax exempt only if those remain dormant for 10 years or longer, to gradually reduce from 35% to 20% the tax imposed on provident funds' capital gains abroad; and a lowering of dividend taxes from 25% to 15%.

Yet Israeli investors are not likely to he lured into funneling sizable funds into long-term savings, pension, or insurance plans just because those are exempt from taxes levied on shortterm plans. To truly re-invent Israel's capital markets, some serious macro-economic changes must first take place.

A thorough privatization drive, through public share offerings, would dramatically expand and diversify the supply of blue-chip stocks in the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. Complete foreigncurrency liberalization would expose Israelis to foreign long-term investment instruments, of the sort which comprise the backbone of developed economies in the West, And long-term, undesignated government bonds would be far simpler to understand for the average investor than a plethora of tax menus.

The problem, however, is that making these available demands from the government a type of economic beroism which it clearly lacks.

Massive privatization demands confronting such monopolistic monstrosities as the Israel Electric Corporation, Egged and El Al, none of which appear on the immediate borizon. A full removal of all foreign-currency restrictions, for a government which runs a current-account deficit in excess of $5 billion, can indeed result in the type of crash experienced by Mexico last ~ year. And the government did not even allow the Brodet Committee to deal with the issue of undesignated bonds - which are long-term loans extended by the public to its leaders. Apparently, officials are scared stiff of this

Kremlin's lust for oil

HE thunderous roat of US missiles raining down earlier this month on military targets in southern Iraq provoked hostility among most European and Middle-Eastern Arab courtries. In sharp contrast, the action taken by Bill Clinton was warmly welcomed by Britain and Israel.

This positive attitude was underlined by Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, who told this column minutes before seeing the American president just over a formight ago that he had emphasized to his host the dangers to peace in the Middle East posed by Iran, Iraq and other countries.

In all probability Netanyahu singled out Russia, which has reverted to the policies of the former Soviet Union and is aiming to become a dominant power in the Middle East once again. The Russian bear has already bugged Iran in a honeyed embrace by building a nuclear reactor for the mullahs of Teheran. It is also working hard to take Syria back into its bosom, bolding out modern arms for Damascus as bait.

But Iraq is clearly the prize maiden being wooed by Moscow. A high-powered Russian delegation just happened to be in Baghdad while cruise missiles were demolishing Saddam Hussein's military installations in southern Iraq.

This Russian cozying up to the Iraqi despot marked the culmination of five years' work by the explained: "This is a smart move Kremlin to become Baghdad's cbief trading partner. Mucb to the chagrin of France, Saddam's other persistent suitor, it was the Russian Romeo in the shape of bulky middle-aged Kremlin offi-cials whn won Baghdad's heart. What goodies did Moscow offer? The Russians (with the French coming a close second) bave gone all out to get the UN to lift the embargo on sales of Iraqi oil to world markets. And it was Moscow who dreamed up the bumanitarian-sounding formula of allowing Iraq to sell oil "to buy food for its bungry civilians_ Money is fungible, and it hardly needed a wink and a nudge to suggest that raw materials for making the latest weapons of mass destruction would soon find their way into the hands of Saddam Hussein's generals. In exchange, Iraq would sell much, if not all, of H. SAMTER its oil to Moscow by means of long-term contracts.

The French were ready to match these offers. But they didn't count on the chess-playerlike skills of the Kremlin boys. These grand-masters added a tidbit: the generous suggestion that $1.1b. of a larger debt owed them by Saddam could be paid off in installments

Russian immigrant knowledge could help Israel cope with a Russia in search of dangerous alliances in the shape of oil deliveries. As still forther inducement to the Iraqi dictator came the unrefusable offer of $2h. worth of high-tech equipment for enhanc-ing the flow of oil from the vast Iraqi deposits to Russia.

Puzzled observers might say: But Russia is known as a major world producer of oil. Why does it need more?

First the Russians protested the American action strongly. Then Rivadh Qeisi, a leading Iraqi official, was invited to Moscow earlier this week to plan a joint damage-control operation. "We are diffusing tension," was the cry from Moscow.

The Russians also revealed that the Iraqis would fire no more missiles against US aircraft. They would also refrain from entering the no-fly zone, despite Saddam's earlier bluster to the contrary.

These soothing words potwithstanding, the Americans, who had been fooled by Saddam in 1991, insisted on sending several thousand troops to Kuwait as a warning that they had no intention of being caught twice by Iraqi trick-

LARRY DERFNER

TOT that he would care, but I'm throwing my support to Ehud Barak for leader of the Labor Party.

I don't understand what all this I don't understand what all this grumbling in the leftward precincts of the party is about. Barak isn't "ideological" enough? He's too "vague" about his policies? This isn't a problem. not now at least.

From everything be's said, Barak seems about two millimeters to the right of Shimon Peres and Haim Ramon. The only important difference between Barak and his rivals is that he can beat Bibi Netanyahu, and they can't.

But we're talking about the Labor Party here, so I can only hope that come Primary Day, Barak's electability will not be held against him.

Having done my bit for our Great White Hope, I'd like to now offer a suggestion on how to get the party out of its drift, pull it out of the doldrums, fire it op, and maybe possibly set it on course to win the next election. (As a declared FOB - Friend of Barak or Foe of Bibi - I've got my rights.)

What's needed is a new approach to the haredim. Peres bas been kissing up to them for so long, and look where it got him. This last time out they gave at least 100 percent of their votes to Bibi.

The haredim don't like Labor. They don't like anybody or any party that smacks of the left. They positively hate the people in Meretz, and if Barak thinks he can ditcb Meretz, let him try to imagine the signing of the Oslo accords if Shas, Agudat Yisrael and one of the little right-wing parties had been shoring up the last government.

For a while now Barak has been doing the traditional Labor establishment thing, buddying up to the baredi rabbis.

I've got what I think is a better idea: Tell them off. Tell them what Labor and, I'm sure, a great majority of Israelis think of them and their followers these days.

THESE pious Jews have finally gone too far. Between the riots on Bar-Ilan Street, the holy war on the Supreme Court and the death threats against its president, masses of middle-of-the-road Israelis, "floating voter" types have become terminally fed up with them.

Against this grim backdrop, it is no wonder that the Brodet Committee concentrated on merely bettering the position of that famous visible band that is already so well tucked into the Israeli middle class's pockets.

Sir, - Fortunately, Moshe Kohn's column, "Wreckers of our own," and Esther Hecht's profile of Lynda Brayer, executive legal director of the Society of St. Yves, the Jerusalem-based Catholic Legal Resource Center for Human Rights, ran in the same issue of The Jerusalem Post, September 6. Kohn reviewed Brayer's broadside, Decimation of Christians in Occupied Territories of Palestine, revealing it has no information relating to the "decimation" charge. Kohn also reports that a Catholic official in Jerusalem told him St. Yves has no official Church link or aegis.

Brayer told Hecht that in May 1990, she decided to "demand that the Church set up a legal-aid service." Hecht doesn't touch on the specific relationship of the Church to Brayer's activities. Was St. Yves founded by Brayer? How is St. Yves governed?

Hecht reports St. Yves is funded by Catholic organizations and private individuals and is housed in the Notre Dame compound. That site identifies it with the Church and makes it the recipient of Churchsourced subsidization. I have been told the Tantur Institute, the Church's prestigious interfaith dialogue center, distributed Decimation of Christians... to visitors from Cleveland, Ohio. Such circulation enhances St. Yves stature and identifies it with the Church. St. Yves flourishes conspicuously in the Catholic institutional garden. It never suggests it lacks Church "link or

"China's need for increasing amounts of oil will result in a hike in oil prices. And Iraqi oil will give the Russians a source of income and political clout with China."

NO LOVER was more frustrated over betrayal by his beloved than the Russian delegation in Baghdad. They knew immediately that the lifting of the UN embargo might well be postponed as a result of Saddam's orislaught against the Kurds. Despite efforts to contact the Kremlin, they discovered that communications were impossible from Baghdad.

Though the situation isn't as dangerous as it was when the Soviet Union was a superpower, the Israeli government is aware of the problem of an increasingly hostile Russia as the Kremlin woos Mideastern Arab states primarily for their oil. Israel will have to learn to bandle the way the Kremlin operates. Among our large population of Russians immigrants there is surely a vast store of knowledge of how Moscow operates, and knowledge of the personalities involved.

The prime minister would be wise to set up one or more think tanks of experts on Russia. It could come up with some urgeotly needed and constructive ideas on how to cope with the fluid situation in the Kremlin.

I'm supporting Barak for Labor Party leader. And as for his campaign...

Israelis were led to believe that the direct election of the prime minister would diminish haredi political power. This was the whole impetus behind the reform: it was was why about 600,000 people signed petitions in favor of Things didn't exactly turn out that way. The various Councils of Torah Sages, the dedicated ranks of Habad, and Rabbi Yitzhak Kadourie's amulets, blessings and curses swung quite a bit of inflo-ence on the direct election of Bibi Netanyahu.

A whole lot of voters, on all points of the political spectrum, are looking for somebody to roll the haredim back. They know the prime minister isn't about to do it. So the field is open to Ehud Barak. Since he can't win the haredi vote, let him go after what may he the even bigger anti-haredi vote.

Admittedly, he'd be opening himself and Labor to charges of bypocrisy, of sour grapes. The party would have done anything for Kadourie to pat Peres's bead instead of Netanyahu's, and Peres was by no means above wangling the blessing of the Baba Baruch.

But Barak still has plenty of time for an about-face. He can put all of Labor's "stinking maneuvers" behind him. Let Barak make it clear that he considers the haredim a hostile force. even if he doesn't put it that bluntly.

He needs, bowever, to offer more than declarations; he needs to put his money where his mouth is. So let him vow that a Barak government will pass a law requiring all Israelis, including haredim, including Israeli Arabs, to do military or civilian national service

I think it's a vote-getter. It would also rouse the troops wbo've been shell-shocked since the election defeat and put some idealism and passion into the Barak campaign.

One thing's for sure about this strategy for dealing with the haredim: It can't fail any worse than the one Labor tried last time.

A spokesman for the American-Arab Anti-Discriminatioo Committee Committee (ADC), which organized the protest, said in a phone interview that he did not believe that there was a "Jewisb cabal" in Hollywood orchestrating negative portrayals of Arabs. However, said Don Bustany of the ADC, he "presumed" that the three top Disney exec-utives - Michael Eisner, Michael Ovitz and Joe Roth, were Jewish.

"I don't believe that the Disney executive board sits down to figure out how to get the Arabs," said Bustany. "However, there may be a tacit agreement among some supporters of Israel, who believe that by vilifying Arabs they help Israel."

Bustany did not call for a boycott of Disney films, as did conservative Protestant groups, which recently objected to the studio granting healthinsurance benefits to partners of gay employees. The protesters' ire was directed against two receot Disney productions, Kazaam. starring Shaquille O'Neal, which includes various Arab villains. Among them is a black marketeer named Malik, which is Arabic for "owner," Bustany said.

Last year's Father of the Bride, Part II introduced a nasty, sharp-dealing neighbor, named Habib, a character not found in the book on which the film was based.

ADC officials also charged that Disney executives had broken an oral promise to consult with the organization in the portraval of Arab and Moslem characters. The alleged promise was given three years ago, following a flap over lyrics in the animated feature Aladdin

The offending lyrics were changed when the film was released on home video. In the Aladdin controversy, the (Jewish) Anti-Defamation League pub-(Jewish) Anti-Defamation League pub-licly backed the Arab position, but not Weiner. "It was a despicable portrayal.

EU applicants may have long wait JONATHAN CLAYTON

IKE eager graduates looking for careers, countries from central and Leastern Europe hoping to win admis-sion into the European Union have filled in the application papers on time. Now, they face a long - and, for many, an agonizing wait while Brussels bureaucrats weigh up their suitability to join a club which offi-cially wants them in, but privately is terrified of the effects the newcomers may have on the existing set-up. "Recently, hard facts have dawned on both sides," said one senior EU official. "Enlargement is not for tomorrow. It is going to be a long, hard process, but that is not to say we are no longer committed to it." Ten countries from former communist Europe - Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Bulgaria, Romania, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Slovenia are all waiting outside the most successful political and trade group ever seen in Europe.

In the cupboria that greeted the fall of communism on the continent seven years ago, the EU's existing member states -most also members of the NATO military alliance that won the Cold War - held out the prospect of quick membership. All the oew democracies had to do, they suggested, was embrace pluralism, adopt market reforms, and impose political control of their once-dominant military. The reward would be a single market with a free flow of goods, people, capital and services stretching from the Baltic to the Black Sea - a global show-case for successful freemarket democracy.

But as so often in EU affairs, diplomats say harsh realities are now acting as a brake oo lofty idealism. Pessimists fear the whole project could be delayed for years, and even the optimisis no longer believe in a turn-of-the-century target date

At the root of the problem is money, most often the cause of EU woes. The prospective new members are poorer than even the EU's poorest countries - Greece, Ireland and Portugal - and much poorer, than those countries were when they joined. Worse still, the applicant states are still overwbelmingly agrarian economies which could torpedo attempts to keep the EU's S52-billion farm budget under control. Unless the EU's system of payments to poor regions and subsidies to farmers is reformed, enlargement could force an unacceptably large increase on the budget - with some estimates suggesting as high as 60 percent. With ioternal EU relations already strained by moves to create a single currency by 1999, diplomats and analysts say a new bout of reform negotiations could take months to bear fruit. EU member states have already begun an inter-governmental conference (IGC) to plot the shape of a unioo that could one day include 30 states. Cyprus and Malta are also waiting in the wings and even Turkey has oot yet lost all hope of membersbip. "The IGC could last months and membership negotiatioos years, even before the laborious ratification process gets underway," said one EU diplomat wbo follows the enlargement issue. Officials say even the most ardent supporters now accept the most likely batch of new members - Poland, Huogary and the Czech Republic - are unlikely to gaio admission before 2002. With Brussels' officials returning from their summer break, the issue is likely to dominate EU politics. The first job will be to analyze boxes and boxes of replies to questions submitted to all 10 governments earlier this year by the European Commission to try to gauge each country's ability to meet the rights and obligations of membership. When that process is complete, the Commission will submit "opinions" to the current 15 EU states on which applicants are most likely to be able to make the grade and a recommendation on whether to open negotiations. The drive over the bridge will take about 15 minutes, compared to 45 minutes on the ferry. But islanders say that comparison understates the convenience the bridge will bring - in peak sum-mer season, backed-up motorists often wait bours to get their vehicles aboard a ferry.

The most comprehensive review of chess history is now available in this 3 volume series by Victor Keats.

Most of the text derives from translations from Arabic and Hebrew, with accompanying commentaries, illustrations, reproductions from manuscripts, and pictures of chess pieces and early chess problems. This is an invaluable reference source for collectors, players and everyone fascinated by this ancient game.

Vol. 1 - CHESS, JEWS and HISTORY brings together writings from all periods which have a bearing on chess, and constitutes a unique review of the whole history of the subject. 402 pp., with 100 reproductions, book plates, Hebrew and Arabic texts, pictures of chess pieces, problems and maps.

Vol. 11 - CHESS AND ITS ORIGINS is the first ever translation into English of the work by Thomas Hyde, chief librarian of the Bodleian library in the late 17th century. 352 pp., with 80 illustrations from period literature and iconography.

Vol. III - CHESS AMONG THE JEWS - a catalogue of Hebrew sources, and a translation and explanation of the work of Moritz Steinschneider.

even considering Before divulging this information, you must get permission from the woman who passed it on to you. It is her inimacy with this man -and not yours - which led to your knowledge of the situation. Revealing this to his new fiancee, then, would be a violation of your friend's confidence in you.

But even if she gives you permission to "spread the word," you must consider the consequences of doing so. Since you are "not especially close" to the bride-to-be, your interference might be regarded by her as an act of aggression, rather than one of concern.

Furthermore, her talk aboot planning a family does not necessarily indicate ignorance about her future husband's vasectomy. These days, "planning a family" can be done in a variety of unconventional ways.

FDA ruling on Teva drug due tonight

US Food and Drug Administration panel is expected to meet today to discuss Teva Pharmaceutical Industrics' peti-tion for approval of its poteotially lucrative multiple scierosis drug, Copaxone.

The administration's Peripheral and Central Nervous System Drugs Advisory Panel panel may decide to approve the drug or request that Teva submit further data, but an outright denial seems unlikely, analysts said.

While capital-market sources praised many of the report's proposals, especially the encouragement of long-term savings, they sharply criticized the committee's failure to effectively tackle the pension

The committee did not give an answer to the mar-ket's major problem, said Yitzhak Shrem, a partner in the Dovrat-Shrem company. "They did not deal with the pension funds' severe trading problems, which stand to be left with untradeable government bonds

According to Shrem, the absence of an institutional system in the capital market leads to extreme market volatility. "There is no stabilizing body in the market," said Shrem, emphasizing that overseas the pen-

Instead, the report should have proposed gradated interest benefits for investments closed for 10 years or more, as is is common in banks here and abroad Shohat also launched a strong attack on Lieberman. "He has no professional expertise," said Shohat. "He has had no experience of the capital markets in his life." While casting doubt on the safe assage of the report through the overnment and Knesset stages, Ravitz said if the cabinet approves the recommendations, he will do his utmost to help ease the proposals into the statute books.

Despite the fact that No. 2 at the Bank of Israel, David Klein, sat on the committee, the central bank issued a statement yesterday saying it was still considering the findings of the report.

Suissa: Ben-Gurion 2000 plan too far away

DAVID HARRIS

PLANS to expand Ben-Gurion Airport by the year 2000 should be hrought forward, said Interior Minister Eli Suissa, during a meet-ing with senior Airports Authority fficials earlier this week.

Meanwhile, in a series of other transport developments this week, the $1 billion tenders for the extension of Haifa and Ashdod ports were put out and the committee looking into the future of the Port of Eilat recommended it stay in the same location and remain only a freight operation.

The Ben-Gurion plans, published by the Swary committee last month, included the immediate construction of a new terminal with three wings, 30 ports for airplanes and the necessary support infrastructure.

However, days later, airport direc-tor Shaul Hazan said even if construction began now, it would not be completed before 2000. Plans for a second international airport, to be built at Nevatim in the Negev, supported by the previous government, have been all but shelved following the Swary report, which cited financial and geographic factors against its development.

The extra terminal at Ben Gurion will increase the airport's capacity to 12 million passengers a year. Seven million people used the airport last year, instead of the forecasted four million.

The Ports and Railways Authority advertised the tenders to extend Haifa Port East B and Ashdod Port. North.

Egged separates tourism operation HAIM SHAPIRO

EGGED has signed an agreement to set up a company dealing with tourism, fulfilling an understanding with the government to separate the firm's tourism operations from those of the public transport cooperative. The agreement to form the separate company was signed between -Egged and Tlalim Yiftah, a company with which Egged has worked for over 10 years, especially in the area of educational-tourism.

The new company, to be known as Egged Tlalim Travel and Tours, is to being operations in January and will cover all areas of incoming, internal and outgoing tourism. It will unify all the current activities of Egged Tours and Tlalim Yiftah, which together have an annual turnover of NIS150 million.

Moshe Teumim, director general of Gitam/BBDO, said Gitam Porter Novelli will offer Israeli clients international public relations services and provide international clients with local representation.

The capital shares of the new company will amount to NIS3 million, with two-thirds held by Egged and the remainder by Tlalim Yiftah. According to the agreement, Tlalim Yiftah will have the right to increase its share to 40 percent. Of the six management shares, four are to be held by Egged and two by Tlalim Yiftah.

Weizman: Peace pushes exports GREER FAY CASHMAN

ISRAEL'S export expansion this decade is attributable to the peace process, President Weizman said yestenday

Speaking at the annual Outstanding Exporter awards ceremony at Beit Hanassi, Weizman said that Israel had acquired more markets and had become more accepted throughout the world than ever before, "because there's hope that we'll reach a stable and lasting peace with our neighbors."

Expressing his personal hope that the peace process with the Palestinians and the Syrians would proceed quickly, Weizman voiced his conviction that some of Israel's export increases will be due to political advancement.

While lauding the efforts of exporters, Industry and Trade Minister Natan Sharansky stressed the importance of finding additional new markets and of making better use of the labor force.

THE wait is over. After a summer of anticipation for European basketball's newest era, Maccabi Tel Aviv plays Limoges tonight in France in one of the 12 games tipping off the Euro League's debut

More teams with more foreign players will play more games, but in the end it will still be the club that scores the most points that wine

Maccabi took advantage of the new Bosman ruling - which doesn't count any European players as the two allowable foreigners and is less stringent on nanarlizing non-European foreigners - to bol-ster its squad with Constantin Popa, Derek Sharp and Borko Radovic, in addition to its two foreign players - Buck Johnson and Randy White.

Those additions, combined with the signing of Doron Sheffer and the return of Oded Katash, Nadav Henefeld, Guy Goodes and Brad Leaf, have lifted hopes for a trip to the Final Four for the first time since 1991.

Although Maccabi's vaunted depth has been dealt somewhat of a hlow tonight, since Sharp and Goodes did not even make the trip to France due to injury, expecta-tions have been heightened by one of the most successful preseasons in recent memory. Maccabi had a 13-0 mark in exhibition tournaments against European foes, as well as a win in its first league game against Givat Shmuel on Monday

However, a tough road lies ahead for the Israelis, as every other club in Europe had the same opportunity to bolster its ranks. Limoges is no exception. This proud club, which has appeared in three European Final Fours including winning the 1993 title has revamped its squad following a season in which it did not participate in the European championships, failed to advance from

THE 1996 Israel Prize winner, choreographer Moshe Efrati and bis Koldmama company, take Kafka's Metamorphosis as the basis for a disturbing, poetic and powerful parable on contemporary Israeli mores called The Bollad of Gregor. It's also fiercely and meticulously performed. At Suzanne Dellal on Saturday at 9 p.m.

RAMI Be'er's Makomshehu ("Some Place") is a powerful dance creation that takes place in a harsh industrial setting and examines relationships between human beings and themselves and between people and their surroundings.

Be'er is one of the more important local choreographers, and his full-length, one-hour works are always invigorating, intriguing and danced to perfection by the members of the Kibbutz Contemporary Dance Company.

Now those who did not see Makomshehu on the stage can enjoy its video dance version as created by Niza Gonen for the small screen. And although the original work has been shortened for this purpose, the power of the piece and the impeccable execution are most apparent throughout. Sanurday

Navy lacks gear to raise chopper from sea floor

IDF will turn to foreign salvage company ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

THE navy succeeded yesterday in locating the acoustic beacon of the Dolphin helicopter which crashed at sea Monday night, but it is on the sea floor at a 650-meter depth, and the navy does not have the equipment to recover it.

Two of the helicopter's three crew members are still missing. The working assumptioo is that the beacon is still attached to the helicopter and rests on the sea floor some 12 nautical miles east of Nahariya. Since the crash, naval vessels and belicopters bave been searching for the bodies of the pilot. Lt.-Col. Zion Bachar, 35, and communications officer Lt. Eran Gravia, 23, but to no avail. The army even sent foot patrols along the shore, but nothing was found. The body of the oavigator, Shahak Sela, was found on Tuesday.

The navy does not have the special equipment, operated by foreign salvage companies, needed to lift the Dolphin from such a depth. It is seeking the services of such a company to help it retrieve the helicopter, the army said. So far, the tail of the helicopter and two pilots' helmets have been found, but without the body of the craft it will be difficult to determine the cause of the crash, which occurred during a routine exercise.

Gabi Last appointed deputy inspector-general

BILL HUTMAN

TEL Aviv Police Chief Gabi Last was oamed deputy inspector-gen-eral yesterday, in a decision made by Iospector-General Assaf Hefetz and Internal Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani that is expected to be followed by a series of other senior appointmeots.

Last is slated to leave the command of Tel Aviv police in the coming weeks and move to national police headquarters in Jerusalem. Earlier this week, Kahalani extended Hefetz's term for at least one year.

Kahalani has called Jerusalem Police chief Cmdr. Arye Amit to his office today, amidst speculation that Amit would resign over the Last appointment. The Jerusalem police chief has long seen himself as Hefetz's successor.

Panel named to develop IDF motivation program for students

EDUCATION Minister Zevulun Hammer yesterday appointed a committee to formulate a detailed program to raise high school pupils' motivation to serve in the IDF, the ministry announced.

The low motivation is not solely the IDF's problem. Hammer said, at a special meeting attended by top ministry officials and a Defense Ministry representative yesterday.

"By developing the right program, the Education and Defense ministries, in cooperation with the IDF, can solve the problem and restore to its previous level the youth's desire to serve their coun-

Deputy Education Minister Moshe Peled (Tsomet) will head the committee. The other members are ministry director-general Ben-Zioo Del, Pedagogical Center director Prof. Ozer Schild and Youth Department head Oded Cohen.

Their program will initially be instituted in 120 high schools, and if it is successful it will be conducted in every high school in the country, Hammer said. (Itim)

Judge releases two due to jail condition

TWO men being held by police on suspicion of illegal drug possession were released by the Jerusalem Magistrate's Court receotly, on grounds that cooditions at the Russian Compound lock-up were "horrendous."

At a remand hearing on Friday, one suspect's lawyer, Reuveo Bar-Haim, appealed to the court to release his client oo grounds the Russian Compound lock-up was overcrowded and dilapidated.

Court President Judge Amnon Cohen decided to have a look for himself, as the lock-up is a short walk from the courthouse. After a visit inside the

An appeal of the decision by police to the district court was turned down.

Earlier this week, another suspect, being held on suspicion of possession of 1.5 kg of marijuana, and also represented by Bar-Haim, was released by Magistrate's Court Judge Zilbertal on the same grounds.

The Russian Compound lock-op is run the Jerusalem Police, and in geoeral used a hold suspects awaiting trial, or convicte criminals awaiting a transfer to a Prison -Service prisoo. The police spokesman way mavailable for comment on the criticism by, the court.
